"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many a heavy doctor's bill. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle ma-ladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal attack by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished

THE PACIFIC
Commercial Advertiser.
SATURDAY, DECEMBER 1.
Travels of four Women of the Kingsmill Group of Islands.

We glean the following curious narrative from the Australian and Hong Kong journals: The French bark Daphne was on a voyage lately from the South Sea Islands to Hong Kong. One day a boat was sighted, and was found to contain four women. They were found to be almost starved when taken on board, and their language was quite unintelligible to the Captain of the Daphne, whose French was equally as incomprehensible to them. However, the benevolent Captain took every possible care of them on board, and upon his arrival at Hongkong, handed them over to the French Consul. The French Consul transferred them to the British authorities, who ultimately sent them to Sydney, in Australia.

They arrived at that port, towards the end of last September, and the local authorities humanely took charge of the poor creatures. An "Oriental Linguist" declared them to be natives of Borneo, and "probably members of a tribe of sea gipsies." We should like to know the name of this erudite "Oriental Linguist." He also advised the authorities to send the poor women to Singapore, for fortunately his advice was not followed, for a Portuguese sailor declared that they were South Sea Islanders, and advised the Sydney authorities to send for Captain Fairclough, of the Marine Board, who spoke the South Sea Island tongues. Accordingly, the Captain called and had a conversation with the four women, whom he found to be natives of the Island Miana, or Hall's Island, in the Kingsmill group. Their story appears to have been this: They were carried out to sea in the boat from which they were picked up by the Captain of the Daphne; some men and children who were also in the boat died of starvation; the women checked out their existence on some roots which were in the boat. The Sydney Morning Herald thus concludes their story:

"They were placed under the care of a constable, and conveyed to the Hyde Park asylum, and as they passed through the side streets they attracted a good deal of attention. They were neatly dressed in Chinese costume, and looked pensively contented and happy as they smiled their snowy teeth, and their copper-colored faces were covered with smiles as they gazed on passers-by; they were not particularly handsome, although one of their number was rather comely, and in general their appearance conveyed the impression that they were North-American Indian squaws, though long black hair considerably helping that idea. They will be proteges of the New South Wales Government until means are found for conveying them to the homes from which they have travelled hundreds of miles in such a novel manner."

We hope that Her Majesty Queen Victoria will send them a present, before they return to their native Islands of the Sunny Southern Seas. Truly, the Providence of God is often very wonderful.

The Awful Danger of Soap.
THE CONSERVATION A WET BAR OF IT CREATED IN A FAMILY.
Some people are averse to the use of soap, and it may come of a conviction on their part that soap is dangerous. That it is dangerous, now seems to be an established fact, if we can credit what some of the Chicago papers have to say about a frightful accident that took place in that city a few days ago. The gentleman had just moved to a new house, with very steep stairs and a very short hall. He was fixing things around in the upper rooms, while his wife and the hired girl, armed with soap and its accompaniments, were renovating things below. They had just finished the stairs, and were at work on the six feet of hall in front of them, when his wife saw a mouse, Dear sakes! She landed upon the top of a table, and shaking her skirts madly, let off a series of shrieks that would have slammed into the wall the value of a good ever heard on an Ohio river steamboat. At that precise moment the gentleman happened to be encumbered with a basket of clothes-pins on one arm and a clock under the other. Of course, he never thought of anything other than that the house was on fire, and like the trusty tenant he was, he went to the rescue, forgetting all about the clock and the clothes-pins. At the head of the stairs he encountered a bar of wet soap, carelessly left by the hired girl, and placing his foot luckily upon it, he seated himself with a suddenness marvellous to behold, and passed down that flight of stairs with the speed of thought. Five feet from his feet, and within time he went over the edge of a step, while valley after valley of clothes-pins filled the air; and the clock—well, it seemed to be vigorously engaged in an attempt to scatter its brazen vitals in the universe. Without stopping to reflect upon such a course, the astonished gentleman shot under the table upon which his wife had taken refuge, knocking it completely from under her, sending it in pursuit of the hired girl through the French plate of the front door, and leaving the frightened better half not very generally in a tub of hot suds, which went over and let her out, as a matter of course. Close outside a man in a mansion was at work on a steam wagon, upsetting an apple-woman, also a toy balloon-man, damaging the apples by bringing them in contact with the gutter, and sending the balloonist's entire stock-in-trade to float forever in the air. The clock, however, was not so lucky, as a single bar of soap; and more possibly—quite likely the half has not been told.

Mark Twain's Military Experience.
Mark Twain, in a speech at the dinner of the Ancient Artillery Company of Hartford, the other day, described with serious simplicity his military experience in Missouri in the early days of the war. His company of eleven men, which he commanded in a hard and bitter struggle.
"We had a good enough time there at that time, barring the rain and the rats, and the mosquitoes and things. We lived on both parties impartially, and both parties hated us impartially.
But one day we heard that the invader was approaching, so we had to pack up and move.
Inside of twenty-four hours the invader was coming again, so we moved again; and next day he was after us once more. We didn't like it much, but we moved rather than to make trouble. This went on for a week or ten days, and we saw considerable scenery. Then Ben Tupper lost patience. He says, 'War is not what it's cracked up to be. I'm going home if I can't ever get a chance to sit down a minute.'
There was mutiny and dissatisfaction all around, and, of course, here came the enemy pestering us again. We didn't get any sleep, and we didn't eat, and we didn't drink, and we didn't do anything but march. We didn't want to go home —before breakfast, and nobody wanted to out at that hour. I detached one of my aids, and sent him to the brigadier, and asked him to assign us to a district where there wasn't so much bother going on. He sent back an indigenant message. He said: 'Stay where you are this time, or I will court martial and hang the whole of you.' I said the orderly sergeant: 'If Harris wants the enemy, let him come here and get him. I haven't got any use for my share. Who's Tom Harris, anyway, that's putting on so many frills? I knew him when he wasn't anything but a telegraph operator. Gentleman, you can do as you choose. As for me, I've got enough of this sashaying round. So if you're my partner, you hear me? The whole regiment said: 'That's the talk for us.' So then and there, on the spot, my brigade disbanded itself."

The President of the Republic of Guatemala Senor Barrios had a narrow escape from being shot by Felix Pages, an insane ecclesiastic who was shot by the President's house, and fired at the President with a revolver. The shot missed, and a struggle followed between the President and the assassin, in the course of which a domestic of the President's household came in and shot Pages dead.
